But there are regular kids there, too, who haven't been bitten by a spider or discovered their super-powers...yet. So, when a conflict arises, such as a stolen particle accelerator, which means no one can go back home, then everyone has to use whatever powers they have to solve the crime. Marvel-us!

 Weeks 6-9: (4 weeks) Beneath the Surface ***

This story begins at the beach, along a deserted coastline, where a girl named Julie and a boy named Jake sit at the water's edge, arguing about appearances.

"You have to look beneath the surface of things, Jake! Things are not always what they seem..."

Just then, Julie notices something at the water's edge. She reaches down and picks it up, saying "Hey! Look at this pretty shell. Did you know that if you hold it to your ear, you can hear the ocean?" She holds it up to her ear.

That's when things change. Her face takes on an expression of surprise. Then she holds it out for Jake. "Jake, it's for you! It's a shell-phone!"

"What?" Jake is startled. He takes the shell and puts it to his ear. "Hello???". He listens, and he is positively amazed. Then, he swallows hard, and carefully tells Julie: "Whoever this is, he wants you and I to..." his voice trails off.

"TELL ME!" Julie screeches in excitement.

"Whoever called has asked you and me to meet with him and his friends because they need our help!...in the ocean!...beneath the surface!"
